

References;

Article title: Ethnomedical uses of major plant species of the Bhimashankar Wildlife Sanctuary in Maharashtra

- [1] Anonymous. Environmentally Sensitive Zones. District Environment Atlas of Pune District. Chapter 4. pp1.
- [2] Anonymous. (2012) Forest Biodiversity in India. ICFRE
- [3] Ananthrajan, Madhuvanti & Thapar, Bindia. (2009). Introduction to Bhimashankar Wildlife Sanctuary. Kalpavriksh Environment Action Group.
- [4] Bille, Nikhil Dhondiram. (2010). Bhimashankar Wildlife Sanctuary, Spider works technologies Pvt. Ltd.
- [5] Chaudhary, Pankaj & Khadakadi, S. Somshekhar. (2012). Bombax ceiba Linn: Pharmacology, Ethno botany and Phyto-pharmacology. Pharmacognosy Communications. Vol. 2(3).
- [6] Dahare, Dinesh K. & Jain, Aruna. (2010). Ethnobotanical studies on Plant Resources of Tehsil Multai, District Betul, Madhya Pradesh, India. Ethnobotanical Leaflets. Vol.14. pp 694-705.
- [7] Dash, Puspa Pulomaja. (2010). A Handbook on Bhimashankar Wildlife Sanctuary: With GIS Technology.
- [8] Deo, Sharmila. (2011). The Environment Education Action Programme in Bhimashankar Wildlife Sanctuary. Kalpavriksh Environment Action Group.
- [9] Gupta, Rakhi ; Vairale, M.G; Deshmukh, R.R; Chaudhary & Wate, S.R. (2010). Ethno medical uses of some plants used by Gond tribe of Bhandara Dist., Maharashtra. Indian Journal of Traditional Knowledge. Vol. 9(4). pp 713-717.
- [10] Pawas, Shubhangi & Patil, D.A. (2004). Observations on Folkloric medicinal plants of Jalgaon district, Maharashtra. Indian Journal of Traditional Knowledge. Vol. 3(4). pp 437-441.
- [11] Patil, J. Kishore & Patil, S.V. (2012). Biodiversity of Vulnerable and Endangered Plants from Jalgaon District of North Maharashtra. Asian Journal of Pharmacy and Life Science. Vol. 2(2).
- [12] Patil, J.U. & Biradar, S.D. (2011). Folkloric Medicinal plants of Hingoli District, Maharashtra. Indian Journal of Natural Products and Resources. Vol. 2(1). pp 97-101.
- [13] Patil, V.V. & Patil, R. Vijay. (2011). Ficus carica Linn.-An Overview. Research Journal of Medicinal Plant. Vol. 5(3). pp 246-253.
- [14] Rothe, S.P. (2012). Exotic Medicinal Plants from West Vidarbha region of Maharashtra. Advanced Research in Pharmaceuticals and Biologicals. ROTHE. ARPB. Vol. 2(1).
- [15] Shivkar, Adesh. (31/05/2008). Bhimashankar Wildlife Sanctuary- Fact File.
- [16] Singh, E.A; Kamble, S.Y; Bipinraj, N.K. & Jagtap, S.D. (2012). Medicinal plants used by the Thakar tribes of Raigad district of Maharashtra for the treatment of snake and scorpion bite. Indian Journal of Phytotherapy Research. Vol. 2(2).
- [17] Survase, S.A. & Raut, S.D. (2011). Ethnobotanical study of some Tree Medicinal Plants in Marathwada, Maharashtra. Journal of Ecobiotechnology. Vol. 3(2). pp 17-21.
- [18] Vishwanathan, A.S. & Basavaraju, R. (2010). A Review on Vitex negundo L. a medicinally important plant. pp 30-42.
- [19] Udayan, P.S; Tushar, K.V; George, Sateesh & Balachandran, Indira. (2007). Ethno medical information from Kattunayakas tribes of Mudumalai Wildlife Sanctuary, Nilgiris, Tamil Nadu. Indian Journal of Traditional Knowledge. Vol.6 (4). pp 574-578.